A remarkably fine copy of this extremely rare Lowell item. From the advertisement on the back cover, it has generally been presumed to have been published in Boston, but, as a matter of fact, it was really issued in Philadelphia, and probably by the Union League Club of that city, the No. 16 on the front cover no doubt referring to the order of sequence in their series of pamphlets. Published originally in the North American Review, and then in this book form, it has never been reprinted except in the article "Abraham Lincoln" in "My Study Windows," where it appears in an amended and rewritten form, with some passages entirely omitted. When published it had a large circulation, but, strange to say, has now almost disappeared, and become one of the scarcest of the writings of this famous author.

Extract from the Will of Edmond de Goncourt:

(Trans.)

"My wish is that my Drawings, my Prints, my Curiosities, my Books—in a word these things of art which have been the joy of my life—shall not be consigned to the cold tomb of a museum, and subjected to the stupid glance of the careless passer-by; but I require that they shall all be dispersed under the hammer of the Auctioneer, so that the pleasure which the acquiring of each one of them has given me shall be given again, in each case, to some inheritor of my own tastes."
